‘The Wallflower’ Diana Foster has little confidence and is exceptionally shy. She has always felt different from everyone else. Sarah Walker is the complete opposite, beautiful, smart and idolised by everyone. But she is a dreadful bully, responsible for all the name-calling and the perception people have of Diana. Diana’s mother also thinks her daughter odd and fails to understand her. A terrible humiliating public incident, sparks up a fire of confidence in Diana. Left with little choice, no friends and a mother who couldn’t care less, she decides to take drastic action. She finds the courage to leave her home and tormenters behind, to make a life changing journey. But will she find happiness? Is becoming fearless and confident the answer for her? And will she find love with Charlie Matthews, a handsome but arrogant man who doesn’t believe in marriage?
